Court Orders Bill Gates, Indian Government to Respond to Lawsuit Filed by Family of Woman Who Died After AstraZeneca Vaccine

An Indian court ordered Bill Gates, the Indian government and the Serum Institute of India — the world's largest vaccine manufacturer — to provide formal responses relating to a case filed by the father of a 33-year-old doctor who died after receiving AstraZeneca's Covishield COVID-19 vaccine.

An Indian court ordered Bill Gates, the Indian government and the Serum Institute of India — the world's largest vaccine manufacturer — to provide formal responses relating to a case filed by the father of a woman who died after receiving AstraZeneca's Covishield COVID-19 vaccine.

The High Court of Judicature at Bombay set a Nov. 17 deadline for the responses and scheduled a hearing for the same day.

In a lawsuit filed in February, Dilip Lunawat alleged his daughter, Snehal Lunawat, died March 1, 2021, of complications arising from the Covishield vaccine. He is seeking compensation of ₹1000 crores (approximately $126 million).

According to the lawsuit, Lunawat "lost his elder daughter. His loss can neither be explained in words nor can be compensated in terms of money. Only some sort of succour can be done by awarding compensation."

Defendants in the case include Adar Poonawalla, CEO of the Serum Institute; Bill Gates, in his role as partner in the development of the Covishield vaccine; the Indian Ministry of Health and Family Welfare; the Indian State of Maharashtra; India's drug controller general; the former director of the All India Institute of Medical Science and others.

A lawyer representing Gates reportedly appeared before the High Court to accept the notice.

33-year-old doctor died due to 'rare blood-clotting event' following vaccination

Snehal Lunawat was a 33-year-old doctor and senior lecturer at the SMBT Dental College & Hospital in Maharashtra State. According to her father, she was compelled, as a health worker, to get the Covishield vaccine.

On Jan. 28, 2021, Snehal received the Covishield vaccine, which is produced by the Serum Institute. Her father claims his daughter had received assurances the vaccines were entirely safe and posed no risk to her health.

However, her father stated, Snehal developed severe headaches and vomiting while attending a workshop just days after receiving the vaccine, resulting in her hospitalization. There, doctors said that she was suffering from bleeding in the brain, low platelet count and blood clot formation.

After 14 days elapsed without her condition improving, Snehal's family transferred her to another hospital, where she died eight days later.

Snehal experienced a "rare blood-clotting event," a complication that resulted in her blood platelet count decreasing due to increased bleeding in her brain.

According to the lawsuit, these adverse reactions have been found to be related to the AstraZeneca and Covishield COVID-19 vaccines in some countries.

Lawsuit claims vaccination occurred based on 'false narrative'

The lawsuit names the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation (BMGF) for its role in helping to speed up the process of manufacturing and delivering up to 100 million doses of Covishield for distribution in India and various developing countries.

In the lawsuit, Lunawat "blamed the Government and others for misrepresenting the facts about the COVID-19 vaccine by making false claims about its safety and 'forcing' medical practitioners to take the vaccine."

Lunawat said his daughter was convinced to receive the vaccine as a result of an "alleged false narrative."

The lawsuit characterized interviews given by Indian public health officials in the nation's media as contributing to this "false narrative," naming several of these interviews, including one by Dr. VG Somani, drug controller general of India, that was broadcast on Jan. 4, 2021, and during which Somani claimed, "the vaccines are 110 percent safe."

It was "on the basis of such false narratives and misrepresentation by the senior authorities … and its implementation by the state authorities without any proper verification, [that] health workers like the lawsuiter's daughter was compelled to get the vaccine," the lawsuit states.

Aside from the named defendants, the lawsuit also calls for action to be taken against social media platforms, such as Facebook and YouTube, and mainstream media for their role in disseminating the "false narratives" and for allegedly suppressing information about the adverse effects, inefficacy or failure of the vaccines.

The lawsuit requests a declaration that Indian state authorities are responsible for Snehal's death, calls on authorities to publish the side effects of the COVID-19 vaccines and to take steps to stop further deaths of citizens as a result of their adverse effects, and urges the authorities to demand compensation from the Serum Institute.

Lunawat said he is seeking justice for his deceased daughter and for "many more people who are likely to be murdered" due to vaccine injuries.

Doctor's death was subject of a WHO investigation

This was not the first time that Snehal's family succeeded in getting the media to tell her story — the incident first became known in India due to her family's efforts to have an investigation launched regarding her death.

As previously reported by The Defender, Snehal's family initially reached out to the Indian government and the Serum Institute requesting her death be investigated, as it was registered as an adverse event in India's "Adverse Event Following Immunisation" (AEFI) database.

However, a satisfactory response was not provided, prompting the family to reach out to the World Health Organization (WHO), which then investigated the incident.

Due to pressure from the family and the intervention of the WHO and the India Drugs Network, the AEFI committee on Sept. 25, 2021 — following nearly seven months of delay — accepted the claim that Snehal's death was vaccine-related. The committee issued a report on Oct. 2, 2021.

This was only the third vaccine-induced death recognized by AEFI. The process of reporting vaccine-related deaths to the AEFI database is reportedly "not easy."

Other Indian court cases are investigating vaccine injury claims, role of Bill Gates

Snehal's death is not the only high-profile Indian legal case concerning vaccine injuries or seeking damages against Gates and others.

As reported by The Defender, another case, Yadav v. Maharashtra, also before the Bombay High Court, was filed in late 2021, by the mother of the deceased, Shri Hitesh Kadve, who was "unwillingly" vaccinated on Sept. 29, 2021, and died that same day due to an adverse reaction from the Covishield vaccine.

The family of the deceased is also seeking damages against Indian public health bodies and officials, Poonawalla and Bill Gates, referred to in the complaint as a "mastermind" and as a "habitual offender of mass murder by vaccination in conspiracy with Government officials."

The Indian Bar Association — an informal group of Indian lawyers (the Bar Council of India is India's official bar association) — lists several other recent legal developments requiring Indian government and public health officials to respond to claims regarding deaths allegedly resulting from COVID-19 vaccines.

For instance, India's Supreme Court on Aug. 29 issued notice to the country's central government, requesting a response in the case of two children said to have died as a result of vaccine adverse effects.

On Aug. 10, the high court of the Indian state of Kerala ordered the Indian government to immediately develop guidelines for the issuance of compensation to the victims of vaccine injuries and side effects, with the government telling the court that such policies are currently in the process of being formulated.

And earlier this year, the Kerala High Court requested a response from the Indian government in the case of a 19-year-old woman who died allegedly as a result of the vaccine.

Indian doctors lead initiative declaring 'international medical crisis' due to vaccine injuries, deaths

As lawsuits make their way through India's courts, a group of Indian doctors are leading an initiative to draw attention to COVID-19 vaccine-related injuries and deaths.

More than 400 doctors and medical professionals from 34 countries on Sept. 10 held a press conference during which they declared an international medical crisis arising from "diseases and death associated with the 'COVID-19 vaccines.'"

The declaration, which emerged from concerned doctors and medical professionals in India, makes eight "urgent" demands, including calling for an immediate stop to the administration of COVID-19 vaccinations and the investigation of all deaths involving previously healthy individuals.

The Serum Institute of India is not only the world's largest vaccine manufacturer by number of doses produced and sold, but it also produces more than half of the world's vaccines that are administered to babies.

The BMGF previously committed, in June 2020, conditional funding of $150 million to the Serum Institute, which also received a $4 million grant from the BMGF in October 2020, to support research and development as part of the COVID-19 response.

In August 2020, the Serum Institute, in partnership with the BMGF and GAVI-The Vaccine Alliance, agreed to produce up to 100 million doses of COVID-19 vaccines for low- and middle-income countries.

In a posting on his official blog in December 2020, Gates wrote that his foundation "took on some of the financial risk" for the vaccine, so that if the Oxford-AstraZeneca vaccine was not approved, the Serum Institute "won't have to take a full loss."

Serum CEO Poonawalla previously called for protection from lawsuits alleging COVID-19 vaccine injuries.

Bill Gates frittered away his accomplishment with Micro Soft by becoming a mass murderer, which he deserves to be convicted of.

I am a computer geek. The information that I heard so many years ago is that Bill Gates father bought him the DOS operating system from another person. I am sure it was on the up and up since it's the crux of Microsoft. But I applaud anybody suing Gates as it's possible that the regular folk hasn't gotten any real information about how Gates come up with the DOS operating system.

No comparison between Gates and Jobs. Jobs was great enterpreneur who ushered in revolutionary, world-changing products. He never harmed anyone. Gates is, quite possibly, a mass murderer. Don't know how you could possible confuse the two.

Correction: Bill Gates is an Accessory to murder, period. Doctors, nurses, and other medical staff who physically injected these poisons are the actual murderers.

It would be more helpful if readers understood and recognized the physical evidence, prior to posting emotional responses...

Bill Gates has espoused belief in population reduction for decades, he lectures on the topic. It's an easy case to tie willful intent to mass murder with his injecting people to kill them 'vaccine' campaign of crimes against humanity.

He needs to be found guilty and executed.

In the United States doctors are not allowed to even administer the jab. My friend loss her hearing 100% along with severe headaches, etc. her doctor hospitalized her and even though it was less than a week after the jab he told her it was due to something else. I know the doctor did not report it to VAERS. I know lots of cases of PEOPLE I KNOW who were assured by the doctors their heart, kidney, leg and back pains, etc were not due to jab. My pilot friend landed in Houston and was told he could not go through airport unless he had jab they came out to tarmac gave him jab. Less than a week later he had stroke on the 4th of July. My neighbor went to Mexico and said he received jab from Doctor. He lives in Canada six mos. and US 6 months. He's a liar.

My husband was forced to take these experimental warp spped injections to keep his job and suffered severe vertigo that lasted for weeks after his second shot. His MDs won't report to VAERS for him and won't make the connection that the vertigo was from the shot. My husband got COVID-19 a few weeks after he recovered from his vertigo. While he was out sick, his employer told him he needed a third shot to keep his job. He refused and has now been terminated and has also been denied unemployment compensation. His employer is affiliated with Harvard Medical School. He did IT for them for 10 years and after COVID-19 went full time remote and they still forced him to take the shots.

Your story is so infuriating! I realize that we're finally seeing the proof of what so many of us have believed about the jab, that it's dangerous and for many, deadly. The problem is, all of you out there who have suffered life changing consequences because you believed your doctor and the CDC cannot get back what you've lost! It is atrocious that your husband was forced to take the shots but then, through no fault of his own, became ill (and thankfully recovered) and on top of that, lost his livelihood! I am truly sorry for your family, and I hope you find some recourse in order to regain some of what y'all have lost!

Similar happened to me and a couple others at work. I got vertigo about 36 hours after taking the first shot and two of my coworkers also got vertigo after their first shot.
After a couple of days their problems with vertigo went away, but mine stayed steady and every time I would turn my head, I would get a sudden vertigo attack. This did not diminish even a little for a month, but then it very slowly started getting better.
I researched it on Reddit, and that information might still be available. You could search there.
I went to three specialists during this time, as well as several doctors and the last specialist really knew what was going on as he saw a lot of people who had the vaccine and then got vertigo, because Vertigo was his specialty.
He put me on a machine and was able to trigger the vertigo.
He told me that if I took the second shot, that because I had a reaction, It might well ruin the rest of my life or it might even kill me. But he was too afraid of the government to give me a note.
There were other side effects too.
Glad to hear he refused I still remember the specialists exact words, "If you take the second shot it is possible that it may ruin the rest of your life or even kill you."
Luckily I worked for an employer at the time that didn't require me to get jabbed, but given I had been warned, I wouldn't have taken it regardless.
I didn't make the VAERS either nor did the two people in my home life circle who also had a reaction.

Absolutely horrible. I am so sorry your husband has suffered due to this insanity. I also knew someone who worked remotely but was STILL required to take the jabs - this makes no sense, and it just confirms that all this chaos is NOT about health and all about $$$. I would find another doctor via the frontline Drs. website and/or a naturopath/integrative Dr. who has a good reputation. I wish you the best :)

Doctors can give the jab. I did research and here is what I found.

According to the American Public Health Association, professionals who will be able to administer the COVID-19 vaccine include:

Nurses
Nurse practitioners
Doctors
Students in health professions
Physician assistants
Pharmacy technicians
Veterinarians (who routinely administer shots to animals)
Dentists
Medics
EMTs
Personally, I don't care if they are doctors, lawyers, or Indian Chefs, I don't want the damn shots.

Doctors were threatened with being fired and losing their license if they dared to suggest that these reactions were caused by the jab. And if they do suspect it's the jab and report it to VAERS, they are most assuredly fired. Plus submitting reports to VAERS is very time consuming.
